

WHAT A WONDERFUL DIFFERENCE

In the Way We Live Today Compared With Fifty Years Ago.

In the '60s we lived on "hog and hominy," but today we live on the fat of the land. That is why it costs so much to live.

"The Way to a Man's Heart is Through His Stomach."

COL. JOSEPH NEWTON BROWN

Commander of McGowan's Brigade in Several Fights

Joseph Newton Brown, colonel of the Fourteenth Regiment, S. C. Volunteers, C. S. A., and Asbury Coward, colonel of the Fifth Regiment, S. C. Volunteers, C. S. A., and the surviving officers who commanded the South Carolina troops through the War of Secession. All our Generals and all other full colonels have passed to the Great Beyond. Col. Brown was in the forefront of all the battles of Lee's army and Col. Coward was in all except Chancellorsville and Gettysburg.

Joseph Newton Brown the subject of this sketch for many years commander of Camp Stephen D. Lee, No. 753, U. C. V., at Anderson, was born six miles east of Anderson, December 16, 1832. Two years later his father, Samuel Brown, and his mother, Helena T. (Vandiver) Brown, moved to Towayville, where the son resided until removing to Laurens in 1856. He studied at the school of Wesley Levereft in Anderson and the "Classical School" of Wesley Levereft and Manning Belcher at Williamston, though the teachers of the classics and mathematics. At Laurens he studied law under Col. James H. Irby in 1857, and practiced in partnership with him until Col. Irby's death in 1860.

On January 11, 1863, he joined Co. D, the Abbeville company, Gray's six month regiment on Spitzys's Island, and on the 15th of March went to Morris Island and was in a detail in a battery at Light House Point during the bombardment and surrender of Fort Sumter.

On returning to Laurens, Company E was organized for the 14th regiment and he was elected captain and commanded the company at Fort Royal Ferry, January 3, 1862, in which his Lieutenant J. A. Power and Corporal S. L. Boyd, were killed. This was the first regiment of the brigade ever under fire. This regiment with the 12th and 13th, formed Gregg's Brigade on the coast until 1862 when ordered to Virginia. Near Richmond the First Regiment and Orr's Rifles were added to the Brigade, which after General Gregg's death was known as McGowan's Brigade, Jackson's corps, and after his death, A. P. Perry's corps.

He commanded his company at Gaines' Mill and was severely wounded nearly losing his arm. While still suffering from it, he rejoined his company and was with it at Cedar Run and made the forced march of 54 miles in two days to Manassas in which battle he was slightly wounded. He acted as Major in the succeeding Maryland campaign, including the capture of Leesburg, Va., and the taking of Harper's Ferry, and commanded the regiment for a time. Then followed the success of Sharpsburg and Boteler's Ford and in December, Fredericksburg.

On the 30th of February, 1863, Captain Brown was promoted Lieutenant Colonel and Captain Abner Perrin, colonel of the 14th Regiment. During the battle of Chancellorsville, Col. Perrin took command of the brigade, and Lieutenant-Colonel Brown commanded the regiment. On the Gettysburg campaign, Col. Perrin commanded the brigade and Col. Brown the 14th regiment, on July 1st. Advancing up the Lutheran Seminary Hill under a furious storm of musketry and shells from the enemies' batteries (Perrin's report) "a sheet of fire and smoke from the enemy's breastworks, and an inflating fire on the 14th, they lodged the enemy, (the First Corps, under General Doubleday, from the strong entrenched position, captured the hill with hundreds of prisoners and the 1st and the 14th regiments leading, pursued their more numerous foes through the town.

The regiments lost more than half their men in killed and wounded, the 14th losing 346 men out of 475 carried into action. On the 2nd of July, the Brigade supported a battery at McMillan's Seminary Ridge, and though under fire, the losses were not heavy. On the 3rd of July they fought at the dirt road near Cemetery Heights, and in a vigorous charge, Col. Brown and Major Croft were severely wounded. On the 31st of July, the 14th Brigade was made colonel of the 14th Regiment, September 17, 1863, they were in battle at Bristol Station, with also some fighting at Mine Run.

On the 5th of May they engaged in the battle of the Wilderness, and again on the 6th of the assault and the holding of the "Bloody Angle" Spotsylvania, C. S. A., May 12, by McGowan's Brigade, Gen. Wilcox reporting: "Among the wounded was the chivalric commander, Brig. Gen. McGowan, (10 A. M.) and the further command of the brigade devolved upon Col. Joseph N. Brown, 14th S. C. Regiment." The brigade was partly intermingled with Harris (who filled the places of those killed or wounded) and held the position without support or relief till 4 o'clock the next morning.

Describing the fearful fighting across the breastworks with guns of ten tonching, General Wilcox wrote: "There is no parallel to this in the history of this war—not any that I know of since the introduction of fire-arms." Gen. Horace Porter, of

JUST CRIPPLE AROUND

Some people just cripple around most of the days of their life, worth about half what they might be to themselves and their families, with all energy gone and only duty dragging them about their daily tasks. They don't know what is the matter, and treat first one symptom and then another, without much result. The real trouble is that the blood is not rich enough to supply the demand of the system. This lack of the necessary element may manifest itself in nervousness, in indigestion, in rheumatism, in emaciation, in that "all gone" feeling. Just give yourself a chance by making your blood all right and see how quick Nature will give you color and energy. Many of your neighbors have redeemed lives almost shipwrecked by the faithful use of Mrs. Joe Perry's Remedy which is a great blood-purifier and tonic. It cleanses the impurities and then builds up the system. That was the case with Mr. John P. Feltz of Leesburgh, N. C., who says: "Several years ago I was suffering from indigestion. For three months I had to live on milk and bread. I was just as weak and nervous as I could be. I bought a bottle of Mrs. Joe Perry's Remedy cured me, after the doctor's medicine failed. You can buy this great remedy of most druggists. If you don't have it for you send a dollar to the Remedy Sales Corporation, Charlotte, N. C., and they will supply you."

STATE NEWS

Orangeburg will invite the next convention of the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias.

Conway Lumber mill burned Sunday. Loss $75,000, insurance $46,000.

Commissioner Watson will speak at the foreign trade convention in Washington Wednesday.

Sam Rittenberg, member of the legislature from Charleston, has preferred charges of assault against three men whom he accuses of wounding him and beating him because he opposed Mayor Grace in the convention. In his statement, he says that threats have been made against Sheriff Martin of Charleston.

Prof. W. W. Rivers, head of the Orangeburg College, has accepted the presidency of the Roanoke Woman's College. He will be succeeded at Orangeburg by Prof. Gailther of Kentucky.

Augusta secures the encampment of militia which was to have gone to the Isle of Palms for the letter of Gov. Glenn to the war department. There will be 10,000 troops in all.

DEATH AT WALTHALLA

Another case to be tried in Columbia is that against T. B. Roach of Columbia for firing at Dr. L. A. Griffith, now mayor of the city, when Dr. Griffith was engaged in stopping Dr. C. C. Stanley.

Dr. Howard Lee Jones of Charleston, pastor of the Citadel Square Baptist church and a trustee of Anderson College has accepted the presidency of College at Hartsville.

Mrs. O. H. Schumaker Passes Away Suddenly. Walthalla, May 24.—Mrs. O. H. Schumaker, 56, died at her home here this morning at 1:30 o'clock, death coming suddenly and unexpectedly. The deceased was twice married, her first husband being Mr. Melberg. Four children by their marriage survive, Misses Annie and Bertha Hampton and Harry Melberg. She is also survived by her husband, O. H. Schumaker, Sr., three sons and two daughters, Otto H. Jr., and John Schumaker and Mrs. Henry Wane. One sister, Mrs. G. E. Robinson of Charleston survives. Funeral services will be held here Monday.

The new Fates of the democratic party are useless so far as honest people are concerned, but we see no harm in them. There ought to be no kicking about fraud hereafter.

Gen. Grant's staff, wrote: "The battle near the angle was probably the most desperate engagement in all modern warfare. A tree, over a foot and a half in diameter was cut down by musketry. We not only shot down an army, but also a forest. The dead were piled upon each other in some places four layers deep."

In removing the wounded in the night, Colonel Brown's younger brother, Adjutant Daniel Edward Brown, was lost by over night among the dead, it being supposed he was in the field hospital. He died two weeks later in Washington.

The struggle continued eleven months longer without any special battles except Second Cold Harbor, and the great blow of the Crater. It was a continuous battle in which the Confederate army withstood the overwhelming forces of General Grant, until the fall of Petersburg and of Richmond, Appomattox and the surrender. Gen. A. P. Hill was killed on the lines below Petersburg on April 9 and McGowan's Brigade, except those on picket duty were nearly all captured after a victorious fight at Rutherford Station, Co. Brown's senior colonel, generally commanded the brigade during the absence of Gen. McGowan. The well written "History of McGowan's Brigade" by Capt. J. P. J. Caldwell includes in part the war record of Col. Brown and the valiant 14th regiment.

In October, 1865, Col. Brown came
